> Dear LaTeX and TeX Users,
> In recent years there has been increasing development of > text/table/graphic editing tools for LaTeX and TeX. Consequently, > easy-to-use tools that can be accessed by a graphical user interface > (GUI) are becoming more popular and many are currently available on the > web.
> Tools like JabRef (Java GUI front end for managing BibTeX and other > bibliographies), LyX (a GUI word processor that uses LaTeX for printing > and supports structural editing of LaTeX markup), and others are > emerging as major players in the GUI tools area.
> The PracTeX Journal Issue 2007-3 has the theme, "Tools for LaTeX and TeX > Users". The intention is to present ideas on the development of, and > experiences on the use of, these tools.
> The scope of the issue includes, but is not limited to : - tools that > assist the author in preparing graphics, indexes, bibliographies, and > other parts of documents; - previews, and PostScript/PDF manipulation > tools; - free or almost free tools;
> - cross-platform tools.
> We encourage you to submit original papers describing your experiences > using LaTeX and TeX tools, and also papers on tool development work in > progress or completed.
